AMONG CHAMPIONS, KEEPS IN SHAPE ALL THE TIME

Title Holder Won't Be Caught Napping When Time Comes to Defend His Title-Trains Easy, Lives Carefully and Looks as He Did at Toledo-Loves a Contest and Longs for Old Days When He Fought Twice a Week.

ACK DEMPSEY is one champion who never will be caught napping when the time comes to defend his title. I've seen them all for quite a little while, and not one of the big title holders ever lived half as carefully as this Dempsey lad. He loves a hard contest and it too much and have lived the life of ease when their title battles were few and far between. But Dempacy isn't happy unless he can work every day. I have just spent two hours watching him in a little slub in Los Angeles, the Western A, C., and I find that the champion looks as fit right now as he did two weeks before he met Willard at Toledo nearly a year ago. There is no superfluous fat on him. There isn't a spot or a blemish on his skin. His muscles are full, round, bulging, clastic. His walst is small, and no fold of loose skin shows at the belt line. He has the cheerful smile of a man who's perfectly fit.

In that little gymnasium Dempsey 6 is just one of the boys. He hasn't take a hand, and the Kid clowed and champion. His voice is no louder and the puts on no airs. He doesn't try to show off.

All since he became roughed valiantly.

Dempsey was sweating freely after an hour and a heff of work, and he went in for a bath and a rub with a coarse towel. But he liked the work and a rub with a coarse towel.

The club is much like the old too well to stop, so came back again Fairmont in the Bronx, or any other for five or ten minutes more of bag Fairmont in the Bronx, or any other mail club where boys gather to learn boxing and boxers train for the area of the course of the course, "Gee," said Jack when he was the course of the course, "Gee," said Jack when he was the course of the course, "Gee," said Jack when he was the course of the course, "Gee," said Jack when he was the course of the course, "Gee," said Jack when he was the course of the co thirty youngsters boxing, punching bags, skipping ropes, wrestling, playing handball. And there was a sprinkling of old-timers who had come out to see Dempsey, Billy Gibson, Tom Jones. Van Court, Kid McCoy and a few other well known sporting men looked on and stood in groups in the corners to tell stories about old-time champions and compare them with Jack, keeping an eye on Jack as they talked, and agreeing that of all the great men who have held the heavyweigh: crown Dempsey is the one who comes nearest to being a perfect athlete.

Dempsey was boxing with Joe Benjamin of New York, Benny Leonard's Dempsey was boxing with Joe Ben-jamin of New York, Benny Leonard's sparring partner and a very fair light-

"Did you ever see anything more graceful than that lad?" asked Billy Gibson, "It's a fine thing for Jack to come up here and box with all these boys, a great thing for these bbys to boys, a great thing for these bbys to boys, a great champion come right in and be one of the bunch. Mr. Newton said that there was nothing in the Military Law to prevent the American Henley regatta to-day.

speey boxed a couple of rounds with Benjamin and two or three more with Benny McCoy, another New Yorker, and with Leo Houck and some other little follows. He encouraged them to come in hard and fight him, and he moved around with callike quickness, swaying and bobling and avoiding blows, blocking with quick thrusts of his arms and tapping lightly in return. Fifteen rounds of boxing is about his daily stunt. But he does other things.

After leaving the ring Dempacy went over to a heavy punching beg—a great, padded bag swinging from the celling on a long rope—and for fifteen minutes drove terrific rights and lefts into it. Dempacy's hit ing is imprecasive. His huge arms plunge in with every blow, the forearm with Benjamin and two or three more last half dozen strokes.
